The use of digital technology and data in health and care is already providing opportunities for improvements in the way services are delivered, and innovations like artificial intelligence (AI), and new technologies are being used to create new care models for the future. This event brings together health and care professionals, innovators, commissioners, researchers and policy makers interested in the current and future implementation of digital health in the NHS and other health and care systems.

Join us to explore in-depth case studies with learning from real digital projects taking place in the health and care system. You'll hear from key people involved in digital health and care, and will take part in innovative sessions with new formats, designed to encourage great debate and discussion.
