Appendix to Recommendation No. R (98) 5

I. Scope and definitions

For the purpose of this recommendation:

- i. "cultural heritage" includes any material or non-material vestige of human endeavour and any trace of human activities in the natural environment;
- ii. "heritage education" means a teaching approach based on cultural heritage, incorporating active educational methods, cross-curricular approaches, a partnership between the fields of education and culture and employing the widest variety of modes of communication and expression;
- iii. "cultural" professionals, associations or organisations are recognised professionals, associations or organisations working in the cultural and environmental field, from the heritage to contemporary creation;
- iv. "European heritage classes" consist of an approach to heritage education, including international school exchanges based on a common project and themes related to cultural heritage; they form part of the curriculum but involve fieldwork outside the school; they allow young people at all levels and types of education to discover the richness of heritage in its context and to grasp its European dimension.

II. Implementing heritage education

Heritage education, which is cross-curricular by its very nature, should be promoted through the medium of different school subjects at all levels and in all types of teaching.

a. Organisation

Initiatives taken by schools, universities, cultural heritage professionals and associations and their governing bodies should be encouraged and facilitated, in so far as they fit into the definitions outlined in Section I.

Efforts of associations and cultural organisations should be supported, inter alia in the establishment of centres which host heritage classes, and the participation of cultural professionals should be encouraged.

Evaluation of the results of each action should be undertaken by the partners and/or the relevant ministries, especially that taken at educational, cultural, organisational and financial levels.

b. Training

Heritage education presupposes a link with school programmes and appropriate training for teachers.

Theoretical and practical training courses should, wherever possible, be organised for both teachers and cultural professionals.

Heritage staff, at all levels, should be made aware of questions relating to heritage education and, if possible be given training in catering for young visitors.

c. Administrative measures

Steps should be taken at the appropriate administrative level to allow and facilitate pupil and teacher travel.

Favourable administrative measures should be adopted for teachers and cultural personnel to enable them to prepare, implement and follow up, in the best possible conditions, educational projects relating to heritage, and in particular heritage classes.

Encouragement should be given to the setting up of educational departments in cultural organisations.

d. Finance

All young people, irrespective of their family or financial background, should be able to take part in heritage education activities.

A partnership, which also may cover financial aspects, should be set up on an official basis between the relevant ministries, if possible within existing structures.

The costs incurred in organising European heritage classes (travel, accommodation, preparation) should be borne, wherever possible, at least in part by the relevant authorities.

The organisers of heritage education activities should, if necessary, be assisted in the preparation of a financial plan, as this is not an area for which they are specifically qualified.

III. Documentation

The relevant authorities and ministries in each country should be encouraged to produce or commission teaching material relating to cultural heritage.

Heritage education activities should be able to employ the most up-to-date information and communication technologies.

Exchange of material and experience and a better multilateral dissemination of information concerning heritage sites and associated teaching approaches should be ensured. The setting up and a co-ordination of networks in this field would be desirable.
